Robert L. Kendricks, of 18 Marion avenue West Indianapolis, was in some manner, not exactly known, seriously, if not fatally, injured yesterday evening. It is supposed he was attacked by highwaymen. He had not left ickleyville far behind, however, before he was stopped by the highwaymen, who, ofter striking him over the head with the nstrument used, dragged him from his buggy to the side of the road, where they rifled his pockets, leaving him nothing. It is supposed that he lay there unconscious for several hours, when he came to himself, and, seeing his horse standing near, climbed ato the buggy and started for home, but when nearly there and realizing that he was so close to his house, the reaction came d he again lost consciousness, but the orse, knowing the house, went on and ed at the door Inis version of the affair is the one be-lieved by the police of the suburb to be the correct one and is the one that was ported to the police of this city. ANOTHER LIE REFUTED

CAPT. JESSE NEFF, OF ROCHESTER, TELLS SOME HISTORY.

His Brother, Col. Elias Neff, Has Not Been a Republican for Twenty Years-Fulton County in Trim.

Last Friday the Sentinel published two-column article purporting to give the views of a number of lifelong Republicans who have recently been converted to the cheap-money nonsense and who declare that they will vote for Bryan. Among those referred to were W. J. Lowry, a real estate man of this city, and Col. Elias Neff, of Arkansas City, Kan., formerly of Indianapolis. To give additional weight to Colonel Neff's conversion the Sentinel mentioned the fact that Colonel Neff is a brother of Capt. Jesse Neff, of Rochester, and formerly a prominent citizen of Boone county, where he served as county clerk. The Sentinel speaks of him as an exsheriff of Boone county, an office which he never held. Besides being clerk Captain Neff was deputy clerk of that county for a number of years. He removed to Rochester a year ago. He is well known to attorneys and G. A. R. men of Indianapolis.

Captain Neff is now at the home of John J. Carriger, 67 Central avenue. Last night he threw some interesting light on the alleged conversion of his brother, Colonel Neff, and W. J. Lowry to free coinage. The latter is his brother-in-law. Captain Neff says that W. J. Lowry cannot be regarded as a "lifelong Republican," as he tan and Siberian; while, as voted for Cleveland eight years ago, although he supported Harrison at the last election. His affiliations with the Repubthem in every style, kind, lican party have been lukewarm, to say

Captain Neff is certainly in a position to know something of the political sentiment of his brother, Colonel Neff, of Kansas. He says that the latter has not been a 1872. At the next campaign he voted for and from that time until the formation of | that there were ninety-eight votes for Mcthe Populist party he was an ardent Kinley and just one for Bryan. Then some Greenbacker. When the Greenbackers "Who voted for Daubenspeck?" It was were merged into the Populistic party he

Captain Neff said last night that he did not care to criticise the political opinions of his brother and brother-in-law, but inasmuch as his name was mentioned in connection with their alleged desertion of the Republican party, and as that fact been carried away with the craze, he consented to speak the truth of the matter. Local politicians who remember Col. Elias Neff's "flop" to the Greenback party say, that Colonel Neff became disgruntled because he was turned down in a Republican county convention, before which he posed as a candidate and was defeated by Samuel Hanway. He fancied that he had been defeated by unfair means and never forgave the party for imagined wrongs in-flicted upon him by some of the local Fulton county. In that capacity he comes in close touch with the farmers from the active interest in the sound-money campaign and by personal contact with the candidates of the county knows the inside facts relative to the progress of the sound-money idea in the rural districts. He says from his personal knowledge judging by what the candi-say he believes where there s one Republican who will vote for Bryan and dishonest money there are five Democrats who will either vote for Mc-Kinley or the National Democratic ticket. Personally Captain Neff says that he knows of but three Republicans who will bolt the St. Louis platform, while he can name at least thirty-five Democrats within the corporate limits of Rochester who can't swallow the Popocratic Chicago plat-form and the Boy Orator of the Platte. His business takes him into other counties in the northern part of the State and by close observation he is led to believe that the free-silver nonsense is on the wane, both in the county towns and country. For the past week Captain Neff has been visiting in Lebanon, his old home. He found that there is a strong dislike in Democratic circles to Joseph B. Cheadle, the fusionist candidate for Congress. At least 250 Democrats in that county will not vote for Cheadle, the "high-protectionist, free-silver turncoat," as one of them aptly termed him when refusing to attend a political meeting the other night, of which Cheadle was advertised to be the bright particular star. Information Captain Neff obtained while he was at Lebanon indicates that there is also a strong sentiment against Cheadle in Montgomery county.

Saw Visions of Bloodhounds.

One free-silver white man sneaked out of the forum last night wishing he had never seen the place. There was a threecornered argument, an old negro man taking the side of gold and a young negro and a white man talking for silver. As is common in these arguments much of what was said was not at all pertinent to the subject, but that does not affect the story in the least. The old negro had just propounded a poser to the young negro and he was stammering while trying to think more dollars you will get for making concrete with free coinage than you get now?" The young negro stammered for a moment and was then interrupted by the white silver advocate

'Let me answer that question," he said. Turning to the old man and apparently forgetting the question, he said, shaking his finger in a most solemn manner in the old man's face: "Before the war you were a slave. You were hunted through the "I've never been hunted by bloodhounds said the old man, interrupting, "but if you should be seen near any house alone at night, you would be hunted by bloodhounds, and that mighty quick, too."

The crowd appreciated the joke and set up a yell of "Hurrah for the coon and Mc-Kinley," and the white man thought of an engagement to meet a friend and left.

Who Voted for Daubenspeck? Last night the debate in the forum sudlenly ceased for a time. Many wondered why the crowd had become so quiet. There was still one man who would occasionally say something for free silver, but every argument, or rather assertion, advanced by him was met by so many arguments against it that he soon subsided. Some one proposed that as it seemed that all the silver men had been converted it would be if such were the case. The silver man who | ences. had last spoken for his cause was apstated later that the silver teller had said that the sentiment of eleven contrary jur-ors was sufficient for him and that he

MEMORIES OF THE PAST

RECALLED BY MANY OLD SETTLER AT BROAD RIPPLE.

Dr. Wishard Tells of Scenes Familiar When He Came to This County-Address by James A. Mount.

At an early hour yesterday morning goodly number was on the grounds to attend the old settlers' meeting at Broad Ripple, and by midafternoon the crowd numbered up into the thousands. The sun came out with a smiling face and every one followed suit. The grandstand was soon filled with the old white-haired heroes who fought bravely the battles of poverty and adversity. At 10 o'clock the exercises opened by the band playing some patriotic selections, followed by the audience singing "America." President Johnson then introduced Dr. Wishard, who addressed the audience on early pioneer life and gave some general thoughts evolved from ex-

"We old men," he said, "have lived to realize three periods in life. In our early years we live in the hope of the future; our middle life is characterized by our duties and responsibilities, and in old age we live in the memory of the past. There are some things that cannot be described; one is the Niagara Falls, another a battle and a third an unbroken wilderness. These things must be seen to be appreciated. It is my purpose to speak of the wilderness. When I came to this country in October, 1825, it was a forest so dense that to get through it at all the ax had to be used constantly." He followed this with a description of the old log cabins, rail splittings, house raisings, log rollings, the old-time husking bees, the squirrel hunts, and then spoke of the dress, of how they used to go "to mill," of the food they ate, and gave a vivid picture of their hunts for wild game. As he talked the old men and women lived well to take a poll of the crowd and see again in the days of their early experi-

condition of the country and related some of the experiences that marked the lives of the early settlers. Among other things he said: "One of the happy conditions of this life is the fact that as we near the closing scenes of our destiny there is memories are the pleasures and joys of the past. Forgotten are the days of weary create a pleasing effect in public, and the | toiling, felling the mighty forests, smoothclub in full uniform will attract much at- ing out the wrinkles of nature's face, when now the aged pioneer looks over the broad acres of waving wheat and tasseled corn where once grew the great oak and glided the fallow deer. To-day you have met with the sky for a canopy and these green leaves whispering music to your hearts, to recall the pleasant memories of the past, to look into each other's faces once more and bid each other Godspeed in the short race yet left to you to run with tottering footsteps.

After speaking at length on America and its opportunities, of the people and their advantages and of their inventions, he closed by saying: "Let us, therefore, reloice that, although we have lived in an age of hardships, we have lived in an age of progress. We have superintended the opening of the fairest flower of civilization; that we have seen slavery, that greatest blot on humanity, wiped out from the his-tory of the world by the aid of our hands; that we have seen constitutional and personal and religious liberty so firmly rooted that so long as a race shall live to enjoy the blessings of a golden sun its tree will continue to grow and cast its shade on mankind. These are great moments in the world's history, when a day is as a thousand years of other times; when to have lived that day is better than to have lived the humdrum life of even an octogenarian; but it is our blessed privilege to have lived not only that day but many of them. And now we are ready to hand down to the generations to come the rich fruition of our hearts, of our minds and of our hands that they may reap the rich rewards that now await them.

In the intermission Union Chapel and Ma-pleton Sunday schools contested for the Hon, James A. Mount, Republican candidate for Governor, who was next on the dress short, as he was very tired, for he has been speaking to crowds almost continuously for weeks. He made some beautiful and patriotic remarks in comparing the conditions of the country as it was fifty years ago with what it is now; spoke touchingly of the days when the music of the spinning wheel was heard in the whitewashed cabins instead of the wondrous strains of the piano enjoyed in the parlors of to-day. Dora Smith, a colored woman, living in the rear of Allen's Surgical Institute, reported to the police that she had been brutally assaulted Wednesday night by two young men, who seized her and after dragging her into an alley back of Landers's pork house committed the deed. Boy Burglar in a Saloon. Early yesterday morning patrolman Walker discovered a man standing in front of Jay's Pearl-street saloon, but when the Walker entered and placed a boy under arrest. At the police station ie at first stated that his name was Frank Ward, but he finally said that his real name was Dupree. He said that he had entered the saloon through a transom and had left two unknown men on the outside to keep guard and signal when any one approached. The police believe that Dupree and his gang are the ones who have committed many of the petty thefts which have been bothering them for some time. Several weeks ago the same saloon was entered and about $5 in money taken. The boy was bound over to the grand jury yesterday morning under $500 bond.
